Strategic Leaders International Course Course Overview

The Strategic Leaders International Course (SLIC) is a five week in-resident professional development curriculum designed for senior military leaders (05-07 level), diplomats, and senior government officials from U.S. partner nations. The course is offered three times a year and hosts courses in both English and Spanish. Leaders are introduced to systemic strategy design through introductory work in the foundational values of national identity, systems thinking, data analytics, design thinking, negotiation strategy, and public interest communications.

The executive level course provides practical application of leading-edge methodologies, actively used in both the public and private sectors, to address the complexities of today's 'gray and green' zone challenges. Importantly, the curriculum is imbued with the importance of cooperation and diverse perspectives. The course supports key aspects of each Line of Effort stated in the 2019 United States Strategy on Women, Peace, and Security (WPS) and includes waypoints along the curriculum journey to enjoin our partner-nation officers in recognizing the incredible momentum, moral legitimacy, and powerful potential that drive the WPS strategy.

The class curriculum is entirely unclassified and is a compelling mix of interactive discussions, various case studies, lectures, hands-on exercises, and a collaborative capstone project derived from the common interests of participating countries and the United States.
